

As managing shareholder of the Fort Lauderdale law firm of Atkinson, Diner, Stone, Mankuta & Ploucha, P.A., Adele Stone has played a key role in improving the technological and management set up of the firm. Besides setting up a redundant offsite computer system for functioning in the event of disaster, Stone has also significantly boosted the firm's productivity through the implementation of a progressive management style. An alumna of the University of Florida and University of Miami, Stone concentrates her practice in various areas of commercial real estate and general business law including commercial purchase/sale transactions, loan transactions, leasing, corporate and business transactions, joint ventures and title insurance issuances, claims and negotiations. In recognition of her professional and civic contributions, Stone has been recognized with several honors this year including The Florida Bar Real Property Probate and Trust Law Section Annual Service Award, Russell E. Carlisle Advocacy Award, The Justice Harry Lee Anstead Board Certified Lawyer of the Year Award and The G Kirk Haas Humanitarian Award. Currently, Stone is the President of The Florida Bar Foundation and the chair of steering committee of the Florida Bar/Florida Bar Foundation sponsored program, FASH or "Florida Attorneys Saving Homes."
